

PENN RR. DEFIES BOARD'S DECISION

Declares It Will Deal Directly With Own Employees in Protest Signed by Rea.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 26.—In reply to the United States Railroad Labor Board's recent order concerning the Pennsylvania Railroad's application to the Board to set aside its decision in the case of the Shop Crafts Union, the company filed with the board to-day a statement of its position, signed by President Rea.

"The carrier will exercise the right," the letter said, "to deal with its own employees without the intervention of individuals or organizations, whose manifest object is the denial of the fundamental right of employers and employees to deal in the first instance directly with each other respecting wages and working conditions."

Oliver Thomas's Body Put in a Mausoleum

The body of Oliver Thomas Pickford, which was placed in the receiving vault of Woodlawn Cemetery on Sept. 25, 1921, was removed yesterday and put in the recently completed Pickford mausoleum. The Rev. Robert W. Cochran read a short committal service. Jack Pickford started for California immediately after the service.

JOHN WANAMAKER

Has the distinction of presenting an exclusive collection of the

Silks, Velvets and Woolen Materials

—adapted for Winter Fashions by CHERUIT, LANVIN, RENEE, the CALLOT SOEURS, and other well-known Paris Couturiers.

A new and glorious achievement has been attained by France, in the silks and other materials which her foremost artists and weavers created and made for this season's fashions.

America each season receives many of the new Paris fashions. In fact, the Wanamaker Store always imports large collections of original Paris models.

But we have taken a step forward this season and hurried here the identical silks and woolen materials that the couturiers adapted, so that the women of America might also have these exquisite materials without having to purchase Paris costumes.

A unique feature of the collection is that there is only a dress or mantleau length in each material or color.

Tomorrow we shall present the first shipment, just off the steamer.

New French Silks

Among the silk-makers of France there are two who are particularly famous. The silks and velvets which compose this collection are from these two. Everyone knows their names!

It would be idle to try to describe the silks. They are exquisite!

Chiffon Velvets

—CHIFFON VELVETS which were the choice of CHERUIT, the CALLOT SOEURS and JEANNE LANVIN. The new dahlia tone is wonderful. There is a shade of blue which without a doubt is the most perfect tone we have ever seen. Then there are the new shades called piment and etrusque.

Metal Cloths

—beautiful gold and silver cloths—some reflecting fuchsia, blue, rose, red and other lovely colors.

MILRAYA

—a new metal and silk cloth called "MILRAYA." This received the favor of the CALLOT SOEURS and CHERUIT.

From the great master

RODIER

SERGE KASHA

—his newest weave in cashmere wool. It is even finer than his famous Kasha cloth. This material was given prominence in the collection of the CALLOT SOEURS.

Kasha Trykho

is here, too; we are more than pleased to have it, because it discloses one of the secrets of Spring.

Raillaine

—the superb corded material which gave distinction to mantleaux by CHERUIT, CALLOT SOEURS, PAQUIN, ROLF and other couturiers.

Perllaine Manteaux

—another wonderful material for sports and day wear.

This exhibit will be presented in the new Dress Goods Salon on the First Floor, Old Building, beginning Tuesday.

The Wanamaker Course in Dressmaking

Last free explanatory lecture Tuesday at 2:30 on the Eighth Gallery, New Building.

The course itself consists of 12 lessons, beginning Wednesday, terminating in four weeks. Fee, $5.

Enrollments may be made at the Dressmaking Course Bureau, First floor, Old Building.

"The New Revelations in Fashions"

have been brought about by the introduction of a NEW METHOD of merchandising and by a NEW ORGANIZATION.

Every day will bring new Fashions. Our Paris Bureau sends us the newest things by every steamer.

New specializations will be constantly introduced. Just now we are featuring:

—women's and young women's suits, tailored by hand in our own workrooms;

—the new "MI-MI" frock for Miss 14 to 20 (Reg. applied for), fashioned of wool jersey;

—the coat dresses for women, which are the vogue of Paris;

—the "GLORIA" corset, an excellent reproduction of the corset which Paris has created as the perfect foundation for her new fashions.

We shall be glad to have you see our newly arranged Salons.

The LINEN SHOP, famous for its pure linen since the days of A. T. Stewart, offers for the first time, Tuesday—

LINENS from Sweden Third to Half Less

Swedish manufacturers have been making good linens for many years. The product of Almedal and Dalsjofors is well known throughout Europe, where, prior to the war, the entire Swedish linen output was marketed.

Owing to conditions in Europe, Sweden is now looking to America to use some of her linens. And we have brought over

The first shipment to New York

It is, in a sense, an experimental shipment. And, therefore, it is a very representative one—larger in variety than our future orders will be (for we are going to continue to import Swedish linens). And, because we want to distribute it completely before our future shipments arrive, we have priced everything.

Time Is Flying

The Great September Home Sales—CHINA, HOUSEWARES, LAMPS—have only 4 more days to run, after to-day. The combination of quality, variety and bottom prices which marks these annual events stamps them as opportunities not to be overlooked by wise housewives....After Friday evening, all goods remaining will go back to their higher regular prices.

China, Lamps, Second Gallery, New Building
Housewares, Seventh Gallery, New Building

The Wanamaker Building will be getting jealous of the A. T. Stewart Store unless we tell of the new refurbishments there also—the new Ampico Studios, the new Phonograph Salons, the Gallery of Salon Paintings, the new China Store, the London Shop for men—

New York Needs a Better Store Than Any Store It Has Ever Had

The neck-and-neck striving of small competition in which most stores now engage is NOT the kind of thing upon which can grow a great institutional store.

New York is the greatest city in the world.

It exceeds in numbers, in area, in science, in arts, in knowledge, in power, all comparisons and all precedents of history.

The varieties of its activities are indescribable in words. The extent of its power is bounded only by the limits of the world.

For such a city as New York, there must be, in the mercantile world, something higher and worthier than small shopkeeping endeavors.

Upon New York, more than any other city, it is incumbent to have a store of national importance and world-wide influence.

For These Reasons the New Movements Observable in the Wanamaker-Stewart Store Are Taken

The rearrangements of departments already accomplished throughout the old Stewart Building, the opening up and putting on display of art treasures collected from all over the world, the new revelations of fashions such as can be seen in no other store to the same degree, the enrichments and enlargements going on everywhere throughout the famous old building—these are all incidental to the new progress which all New York and all the nation will watch with the liveliest interest.

To no other store could the opportunity so fitly belong.

The Wanamaker Store here established is in almost the exact geographical centre of the great City.

It is easily and directly accessible to the greatest number of people.

It has the most extensive street frontage of any place of mercantile business in all New York.

Keeping to its old, original location, unaffected by a fever of movement toward a section of inflated real estate values, it has a considerable advantage of lower expense, and having mercantile control of the largest volume of merchandise of any retail business in the world, it is in a sound position to bring to its customers uniformly greater values in merchandise than any other store.

It is well known to be, in many particulars, cleaner, brighter, pleasanter than any other establishment, and most healthful.

With its all-the-year-round offices and representation in London, Paris, Yokohama, and with large purchasing powers in practically all quarters of the world, it provides original trustworthy, first-hand merchandise of virtually every description in better condition, in better selection and usually at lower prices than any other can possibly do.

Its interests in music, in the arts, in the sciences, are such as are nowhere else even attempted.

Its possessions, partly for education, of rare and precious furnishings and antiques are such as can hardly be seen elsewhere even in the notable museums.

These are some of the present advantages.

Let Them Serve as Indications of the Greater Growths to Which We are Now Striving

New York calls for a store worthy of her greatness, compatible with her glory. Here is the mercantile institution that answers the call.
